Mrs. Boddy hails from the northwest suburbs of Chicago and realized early on that her passion for music would lead her to become a musician educator. She loves working with singers of all ages as a clinician and guest conductor for workshops and festivals in the Chicago suburbs. Mrs. Boddy earned degrees from the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana and then VanderCook College of Music in Chicago. She currently has the privilege of working as a choral director in the Indian Prairie Schools, having previously served as Director of Vocal Music in the Wilmette Public Schools for 14 years. In her tenure in both the New Trier & Naperville communities, Mrs. Boddy has been recognized as an educational leader, bringing advocacy for a richer learning experience in choir. She has consistently received high recognition for her choral ensembles, earning perfect ratings at contests and being chosen to present commissioned works. Mrs. Boddy's musical experience has also extended into directing adult community choirs and orchestra pit ensembles. She has extensive professional experience as a vocalist, pianist, accompanist, voice coach, and judge. She enjoys giving back to her profession by serving as a student teacher cooperative thru many universities- most notably from Northwestern University, University of Illinois, Northern Illinois University, Millikin University, and DePaul University. She is a member of ACDA, ILMEA, and NAFME. Mrs. Boddy proudly serves on the leadership committee for the Illinois Comprehensive Musicianship through Performance Project (ilCMP). Most importantly, Mrs. Boddy loves serving the Lord by singing on the worship team of Harvest Bible Chapels in the Chicagoland area. In her spare moments, she treasures her time with her husband Chris, and children, Alex, Ben, and Grace.
